Worry over ill-health does your health no good, and merely causes wrinkles, that make you look older than you are.

Connecticut Not Doing Its Duty

Press Took Part in the Efforts to Increase the Enlistment

Fifty Years Ago—Letters From Officers at the Front—Raising New Company Here—Many Articles Forwarded to Men at the Front.

Following the battle at Port Royal there were exciting times and many letters of interest were sent home by soldiers who took part therein. The Norwich men as well as the others had exciting experiences and they secured a large amount of goods left behind by the rebels so that they felt as though they did not need the assistance from home, and it could be turned to the aid of others in the field.

Fifty years ago the past week the liberty pole was erected on Franklin square and the sailing over it at the time of three bald eagles was considered a good omen. An interesting story regarding religious services in the 5th regiment was printed and efforts were being made to recruit a new company here for the 13th. It was maintained that the state and this country was not doing its duty in this regard.

There was a large amount of goods forwarded to the soldiers in the field during this time. One reference was made to the large amount of goods and money raised here on one Sabbath in 1878 for the continental army, amounting to about $7,500.

Thanks For Remembrances.

The following items were taken from the Bulletin of fifty years ago corresponding to the past week:

November 26, 1861—Dr. Lathrop surgeon in the Eighth writes: I wish to thank the citizens of Norwich for their kind remembrance of us. Before the box arrived we received a note from Miss Greene, saying it contained five dresses, 14 pillow cases, ten plain blankets. I am sure I only speak the sentiments of all the regiment when I say it lightens our burdens to know that we are so kindly remembered.

The Horton Cadets arrived in town last night from Windham and after saluting the Bulletin office marched up Broadway and dispersed to homes where they were entertained. Captain John Huntington is commander. Today they will have a dress parade at East Great Plain.

The Lyon Rifles, Captain Braley, of Williamsville went into camp with the Twelfth regiment at Hartford on Monday.

A member of the 8th regiment, who in the coast division writes: Besides our chaplain, who is socially and generally popular we have two ordained ministers in the ranks. The praying minister in the camp at Jamaica was the best I ever attended.

There was no waiting and the voice of prayer never seemed to me so sweet as in camp. It is our intention to organize a church in the regiment.

Liberty Pole Up.

November 21, 1861—On Wednesday morning at the topmast of the new liberty pole had been started on its ascent, after the liberty cap had been set, three bald headed eagles were seen soaring majestically over the square. The citizens gathering congratulated themselves upon the omen.

Charles Lannan the well known author who was Mr. Webster's secretary, fishing companion and biographer, has been expected to one of the most responsible clerical positions in the house of representatives. He is a native of this city.

A fleet of old whale vessels some 25 in number has been quietly gathering in New London harbor for some weeks past, preparatory for a start southward. Eight vessels of the fleet are expected to start on their way to the south.

The ships are considerable advanced in years and heavily loaded, and we should not be surprised at anytime to hear that they had gone to the bottom. In addition a fleet of 16 sailed from New Bedford all loaded with iron. It may be that the government intends this expedition as a rough joke on the people of Charleston and

EXHIBITION OF FAMOUS PAINTINGS AT ART SCHOOL

Shown in Converse Art Gallery and Open to the Public—Examples of School of 1830 Loaned by F. B. Williams of Hartford.

It will interest lovers of art in Norwich to know that recently Frank B. Williams of Hartford has kindly loaned to the Converse Art school his entire collection of pictures, comprising as it does, some fine examples of the so-called school of 1830, together with interesting work of other artists, among whom are William Morris Hunt, J. C. Carter, B. deBlas, Durand, and Louis Tiffan.

One-half the collection has been hung in one of the smaller galleries of the Converse Art building where the public is free to visit it at any time between the hours of 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Perhaps the most important canvas in the collection is the fine example of Corot, entitled "Vill de Lavray." This is really a beautiful example of the work of this celebrated painter, and while the composition is perhaps not so important as that of the famous "Dance of the Nymphs," the color is fine and beautiful, especially the sky with its warm, rosy clouds and translucent greys and blues, while the distant hills are bathed in a pearly mist light so dear to the heart of this painter.

The foreground and middle distance are composed of tender greens and greys, while the group of willows, near the center of the canvas, lend a fitting balance to the color composition, with their warmer browns and greens.

The necessary state of white in the foreground is furnished by the cap of a peasant woman dipping water from a spring.

The canvas by Jules Dupre, another of the school of 1830, who was perhaps more influenced by the old masters than many of the "moderns," is deep and rich in color, somber and lonely in mood, with fleecy clouds scurrying every where in the sky, and a tree of a rich, warmer tone. The whole gives emotional pleasure to all who are fond of the best and richest harmonies.

The Daubigny is a fine example of this school. The warm, rich tones of the sky and the landscape, with the low, blue hills in the extreme distance, while the early morning sky, with its light and tender harmony, is a flock of sheep peacefully feeding. They are canvases full of the quiet beauty of the French country, rich in color and sentiment.

Two charcoal heads by William Morris Hunt, show the breadth and simplicity of his painting. Hunt was one of our most celebrated painters and a beautiful example of his work, now on loan to the Worcester Art museum.

"Landscapes with Cattle" is a good example of a Durand, an early American landscapist.

Three landscapes by John C. Carter, with their very rich coloring, show the artist's attitude toward nature and careful attention to detail.
